I. DetailsSinch'ŏn-gun Town Plan:

25X1

1. Sinch'ŏn-gun is the third largest residential area in population throughout Hwanghae-namdo. The largest area is Haeju-si, and the second largest one is Charyŏng-gun. Sinch'ŏn-gun is the seat of the Sinch'ŏn-gun authority. During the War, this town underwent 30 percent damage (partly recovered after the Armistice). This area is dominated by farmers, and is famous for its large yields of rice in North Korea, as is Charyŏng. No military troops are located in this town.

25X1

2. Sinch'ŏn-gun seemed a concentration point of the unemployed, ex-convicts, and undetected burglars, plus anti-Communist elements. The internal affairs controls in this area are rather tight and strict. Sinch'ŏn-gun is also famous in North Korea for the so-called "Sinch'ŏn mass slaughter" a total of 5,450 Communists were killed in groups by the local anti-Communist residents, and later, all the bodies were buried by Communists following their recapture of this area. The local authorities give this area the name of "nest of reactionaries". In Sinch'ŏn-gun, strangers are liable to frequent and strict police check on the streets and at lodging houses.

3. The following is an explanation of the attached sketch (Sinch'ŏn-gun Town Plan):
